

No Support For Schools Teaching Evolution

BAPTISTS GO ON RECORD OPPOSED TO SUCH DOCTRINE

Next Meeting Place is Covington—Laymen's Banquet Last Night and Sunrise Prayer Meeting on Pinnacle Today.

CONVENTION HAS LAST MEETING TONIGHT

Covington was selected for the convention of the General Association of Kentucky Baptists next year, the report being made by the nominating committee this morning. W. E. Mitchell of Hodgenville will preach the annual sermon.

Following is a copy of the resolution condemning evolution passed by the convention last night:

"(1) That whereas the theory of Darwinian evolution is being taught in many institutions of learning and whereas this theory contradicts the divine account of creation as given in the Book of Genesis, exalts the brute, degrades man and dishonors God, and (2) Therefore be it resolved by the General Association of Kentucky Baptists in session assembled in Middlesboro, Ky.,

"1. That we as the representatives of 275,000 Kentucky Baptists are unalterably opposed to the teaching of Darwinism in any of our denominational schools or other schools for whose support we are taxed

"2. That we as Kentucky Baptists, with all financial support from any of our denominational schools in which is taught the Darwinian or other theory of evolution that contradicts any part of Holy Writ.

"3. That this body memorializes the Southern Baptist convention to withhold all financial support from schools in which the rationalistic theory of evolution is taught as a fact."

Signed, J. W. PORTER.

The Rev. Porter has been asked to deliver his famous lecture "Evolution" at 8 o'clock tonight at the First Baptist church as the closing address of the 56th annual Baptist convention.

The Laymen's Banquet last night at the Cumberland Hotel was a great success and was declared to be the most enthusiastic laymen's meeting that had ever been held. One hundred and seventy laymen from all over the state attended. W. S. Farmer of Frankfort, chairman of late laymen's work, presided and closed the meeting with an urgent appeal for every person present to carry home the enthusiasm of the banquet.

A delegate from each district represented gave a one-minute report, about fifty in all being given. Other addresses were as follows: Lyman B. Hiley, secretary of the B. Y. P. U. in the state; Rev. W. A. Gardner, Sunday school secretary for the state; T. R. Hill, Middlesboro, "A Message from the Pinnacle," Judge J. M. Stevenson, Winchester; Dr. John L. Hill, Nashville; Fleet Goodrich Louisville; W. W. Peavyhouse, Frankfort, deputy state banking commissioner; Dr. C. M. Thompson, corresponding secretary of the Baptist state board of missions; and W. S. Farmer.

Probably the most unusual feature of the convention was the sunrise prayer meeting held this morning on The Pinnacle. One hundred and forty-two convention delegates, including nine women, were out ready to start at 5 a. m. and climbed to the top of The Pinnacle for the service. The meeting was under the direction of the Barnea Class and the service was in charge of the class officers. Ed Hoe directed the singing. Speakers were the Rev. T. C. Crume of Latonia, the Rev. J. M. Black of Harlan, and the Rev. Arthur Fox of Mayfield.

A resolution was passed that a report of this unique meeting be sent to the Western Recorder and the Rev. Keyser of Bardonia was elected to put it in. A vote of thanks was given the Barnea Class for the excursions. After the service the delegates were brought back to town in cars and they had breakfast at the Basy Bee.

CONSERVATIVES ARE SURE OF MAJORITY IN PARLIAMENT

Party Has Large Lead Over All Others For House of Commons Seats—Two Women Are Chosen.

WINSTON CHURCHILL IS DEFEATED FOR REELECTION

By Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Conservatives seem certain to have the majority over all other parties in the new House of Commons. With 164 divisions still to be heard from at 4 o'clock this afternoon, they had 305 seats. The number necessary to control is 303. Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, was defeated by a Conservative, John Jacob Astor was elected. Two women also were chosen—Lady Astor and Mrs. Margaret Wintreham.

Winston Churchill, former secretary for the colonies, was defeated for reelection.

The campaign and the link between the $75,000,000 campaign and stewardship. The answer he said was, Crown Jesus. So far, he said, Baptists had crowned Jesus in the first years of the campaign and the campaign stands as originally launched and we are going to continue to stand by it. "Nothing more glorious has come to us than those happenings which have clustered around the campaign and we can and we must not fail."

George Ragland, pastor of the Lexington church, but until recently teacher of Greek and Latin in Georgetown college spoke on "Stewardship Leading a Layman into the Ministry."

He explained that he has not as yet been ordained and can speak from the layman's viewpoint. He said that the one thing which had of late impressed him was that older men were not going into the ministry. This is one reason he said that the call had come so strongly to him from God to leave off being a Greek teacher and with only the experiences of the class room go into the ministry to do a great good.

W. E. Hunter spoke on the "Teacher and Stewardship." He elaborated on the fact that the preacher should always remember he is God's man. He says it is a preacher's duty to study God and study the ministry.

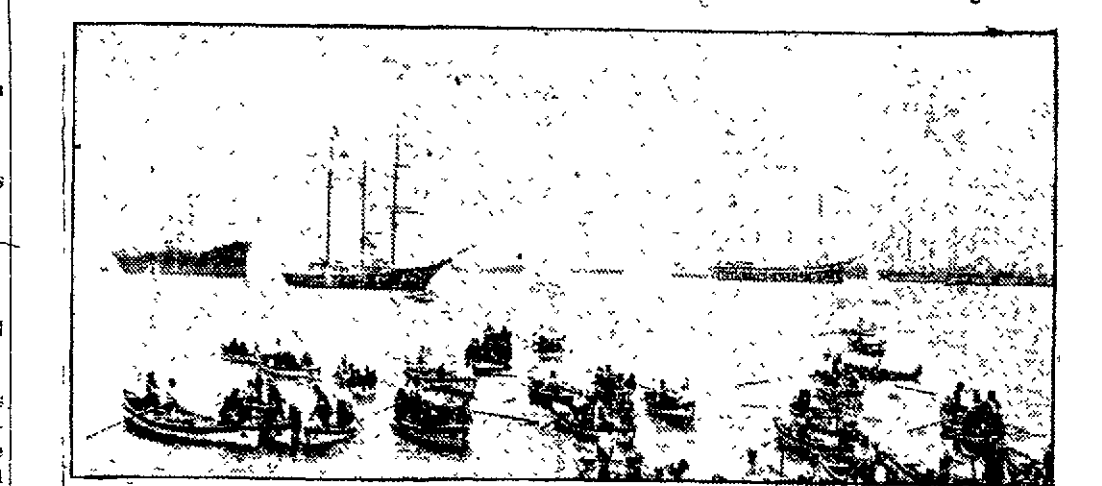

"I believe in preparation but I believe," he said, "that the day has come when the man God can use is the man that will lay all on the altar and be just God's man. And the one great duty of a pastor is that he must preach against treasures on earth and more treasures in Heaven."

Following these talks three reports were given from Baptist seminaries.

Reports of Sunday school work and the religious press took up the time yesterday afternoon. W. A. Frost, of Louisville, recent moderator of the General Association, talked on "The Religious Press." R. J. Parky spoke on schools and colleges and O. L. Green of Bowling Green gave a report on the school there.

The house committee will comprise a representative of each participating club. National headquarters of several fraternities will be located in the building.

FINDS INTEREST IN MIDDLESBORO

Daily News Manager, Building Up Circulation in Nearby Cities, Reports Progress There.

G. E. Ledson, manager of the Middlesboro Daily News, returned last night from a two days' trip to Harlan, Benham and Lynch where he has been locating official news correspondents and subscription agents. It is his plan to build up an extensive circulation in that district.

In all three places visited, Mr. Ledson says he finds people very much interested in Middlesboro. Everywhere he spoke of the new Cumberland Hotel, it was a surprising fact, he says, that in instances where he made out possible subscription lists he found more than 75 per cent of the people listed interested in Middlesboro directly either through relatives living here or business relations.

The amount of building going on in the town visited was one of the most noticeable features, Mr. Ledson says. A new commissary and a new theatre are being built at Benham, a new commissary at Lynch and several stores, hotel and residences in Harlan.

The immediate farming section will be visited by Mr. Ledson within the next few days where other subscription agents and correspondents will be appointed. This district will take in Rose Hill, Bwing, Tazewell, Harrogate and Cumberland Gap.

NEW YORK FRATERNITY MEN HAVE NEW CHIEF

By Associated Press
New York, Nov. 16.—College fraternity men are the latest New Yorkers to turn cliff dwellers.

The high price of lodgings, which has driven many families from private houses into apartment houses, has caused members of various fraternity clubs to seek a common roof.

To meet this need the Fraternity Clubs Building a sixteen story structure, is being erected at Madison Avenue and 38th street.

Members of the various clubs, nearly all of them college graduates, will have their own private clubs quarters and sets of sleeping rooms, but while they may lounge and slumber under the Greek emblems of their own brotherhoods, they will eat and exercise in a communal dining hall and gymnasium.

The house committee will comprise a representative of each participating club. National headquarters of several fraternities will be located in the building.

SMITH MURDER TRIAL STARTS

Jury From Knox County To Hear Case—To Try Defendants Separately.

The Rev. A. S. Pettie elected vice-moderator Tuesday, celebrated his fiftieth anniversary in the ministry May 12. His first pastorate was at the old Hillsboro, Ky., church. Most of his service has been devoted to the Baptist church in Mayfield, Ky. At present he is pastor of the Baptist church in Hickman, Ky. He is one of the most striking figures at the convention as he stands erect, tall and slender, with the face of a scholar and teacher framed about with snow white hair that has just a hint of a wave in it. In passing today several happily said he is the living picture of the old time Kentucky colonel of whom much is said in history and fiction.

The Rev. B. F. Jenkins of Owensboro messenger to the Baptist convention is said to be the oldest in attendance. He has been preaching for 53 years and has held pastorates for fifty years. He has served as pastor in fourty-four churches, conducted 204 revivals in which 8,000 have professed faith and 7,500 baptized. Under his ministry forty-four have given themselves to the ministry, twenty-six of whom have been baptized by him.

Mrs. L. L. Roberts of Lexington, recently elected president of W. M. U. at Cynthiana, Ky., is among the delegates in Middlesboro attending the 56th Annual Baptist conference.

The Campbellsville Baptist church, represented in Middlesboro at the 56th annual Baptist conference by the Rev. H. S. Summers is known as the church that spans Three Centuries. This church was built in 1701 and was originally called the Pittman Creek and Robinson Creek church. This is the church where the students of the Russell Creek Baptist Academy worship.

J. Francis Wilson is the only colored delegate attending the annual Baptist convention in Middlesboro this week. He is state colored organizer of the B. Y. P. U. and state Sunday school missionary worker. Two years ago he organized the two local colored B. Y. P. U. organizations.

NEAR EAST PEACE PARLEY MAY BE OF PRIME IMPORTANCE

Primary Purpose to End War Between Greeks and Turks For Good—United States Not Officially Represented.

RUSSIANS INSIST ON PROPER CONSIDERATION

By Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Nov. 16.—The complicated Near East situation, which constitutes perhaps the sorest spot now remaining in European political affairs, is to have what promises to be thorough airing in the diplomatic gathering of prime importance which began Monday, and which may continue for several weeks.

Invitations to the Peace Conference, were sent in the names of Great Britain, France and Italy to the governments of Japan, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and the United States. The same governments also invited Russia and Bulgaria to send representatives here at a later date to participate in discussions concerning the Straits of the Dardanelles—one of the most important subjects on the agenda.

Primarily, the plenipotentiaries will seek to end the war in the Near East between the Greeks and the Turks, which has been sizzling, and at times assuming more menacing proportions, ever since the Sevres Treaty of 1920. It formed the Turk that his presence was no longer desired in Europe. Actual military operations, in fact, were halted only a month ago when the Turkish forces under Mustafa Kemal Iusha, commander in chief, of the Nationalist Army, consented to an armistice following the complete defeat of the Greeks.

Russia Insists On Peace

The attitude of both Russia and the United States toward the conference has presented many interesting aspects not the least of which is the Russian contention that she must take a leading part in any negotiations centering around the Straits, in which she has a tremendous commercial interest.

"We do not make threats and are not rattling the swords," Foreign Minister Tchitcherine said recently, "but we do insist upon proper consideration in all questions relating to the Near East, and particularly the commercial freedom of the Straits."

The United States, on the other hand, has declined to participate officially in the conference, holding that as it never had been at war with Turkey, it did not believe it could appropriately take part in framing a treaty of peace with that nation in association with the allied conferees.

The Washington government did say, however, that it had sufficient interest in the conference to send observers here for the parley, and outlined the subjects which particularly concerned it. Among other things, the United States is on record as favoring unqualifiedly the freedom of the Dardanelles; the Sea of Marmora and the Bosphorus, as well as the protection of racial and religious minorities.

America Favors Russia

It also is recognized, according to the American Secretary of State, that the United States has certain very definite rights under the so-called capitulatory treaties, pertaining to extra territorial concessions granted foreigners; and again that the Washington government is not disposed to see Americans discriminated against in favor of the nationals of other nations.

Another side-light on the conference and one which has played no small part in the preliminary interest, is the attitude of the United States as regards the allied tendency to exclude Russia from participation in the general deliberations.

It is understood here that the American government is strongly inclined toward the belief that no permanent solution of the Near East problem can be hoped for unless steps are taken to conserve and protect the legitimate interests of Russia in any settlement that may be attempted.

THE RED CROSS IN MIDDLESBORO

Less than half the Middlesboro Red Cross budget has been raised thus far in the drive, and though there are two more weeks of the campaign, we wonder, when we hear that Knoxville, Nashville and the larger cities have already gone over the top, whether Middlesboro people as a whole realize the exact importance of the work here as removed from the great national work.

The work that Miss Marx, the Red Cross nurse, has done in the public schools alone is enough to recommend the organization ten times over. In the two years she has been here she has made health work, including hygiene, calisthenics and general instruction a definite factor in the school curriculum. She has personally examined every pupil in the public schools and filed their records. And she has made such a remarkable improvement in conditions that, at the recent national convention, her public school work was voted the best in the entire United States.

Aside from school work, then, the Red Cross attends to charity cases, the investigation of sanitary conditions, to clean up campaigns, and to a thousand and one other things for the health and moral betterment of the community.

The budget asked this year is $4000, a modest sum compared to the budget of other cities and considered in the light of the work the Red Cross does. Most of this money is to be spent here in Middlesboro. All that is not spent here goes to the great relief work which the national organization carries on, in particular, the Near East relief now, and there is no one who is not anxious to help in this work now.

The members of the Woman's Club are canvassing the residence districts of the town this week for subscriptions and memberships to the Red Cross. Next Tuesday the final big drive in the business section will be made. Let us put it "over the top" in good style.

BACK YONDER

The thrill that comes once in a lifetime tingles through the veins of William Jones, driver of Fire Engine No. 2 at West Newton, Mass.

Wandering down a side street Jones passes the old Davis grammar school. It is being torn down. Among the wreckage he finds a little desk at which he sat, years ago, as a school-boy. Memories flood up as William recalls the golden days when he was plain Bill, a small, disillusioned lad in knee pants.

So he sits meditating. A photographer with imagination chances along, clicks his camera—and so we get the story.

Do you remember that little desk you sat at, back yonder in the past, in your early school days? Next time you are in the old home town hunt up the old school house and sit—or try to—at your former desk.

You will get the shock of your life, and you'll wonder how you ever managed to squeeze in. It will seem ridiculously small, that little desk. And it will impress you with the vast and mysterious channels that take place in us humans during life.

Doesn't it start you thinking—the ink bottle with rubber stopper, the sun stuck under the desk, the place you carved your initials, the dusty map on the wall, blackboard erasers, teachers pointer and the cloakroom where bad boys were sent?

The old school house, in many cases, has long since disappeared at the hands of wreckers. But it cannot be torn down in memory.

It is good that we can keep the old schoolroom and its associations in memory, and that we can turn to them occasionally. The recollection is refreshing, for many of us left the best part of our real selves back yonder. Time has mellowed some, soiled and hardened others.

It is rather startling, when you think back over those days and make comparisons with now.

How many of your childhood ideals, ambitions and illusions have you managed to cling to, despite repeated attacks by that arch-rover—the grim reality of mature life?

And what wouldn't you give to know what has become of all those little lads and lassies who learned their letters with you?

If there is anything more pathetic and heartrending than the battered little old school desk we have yet to hear of it.

AMERICA AND THE NEAR EAST

There are Americans who assume it the bounden duty of this country to send an armed force overseas to make war against the Mohammedan Turks and prevent them from annihilating the Christian Armenians. That such are earnest will not be denied, they are is not to their discredit. But some of them go to the point of fanaticism.

The advocates base their declarations on the foundation of duty. Have they counted the cost? There is no other war that is quite so savage as a religious war. The antonym of that came with the birth of Christ and the inception of the Christ, when the shepherds heard the angels proclaim Peace on Earth and Good Will Toward Men.

Not so with the Moslem religion. From the beginning its pathway of progress has been marked with human blood, and the destruction of millions of human lives. One of their beliefs they have been taught to believe it killed in battle fighting or their religion, the religion they have been taught, the thus slain will be at once translated into an abode with Allah, the Mohammedan supreme being. They are fighters buoyed on by fanaticism, the extreme brutality of fanaticism.

Americans might go to the rescue of the Armenians, but it would mean the loss of thousands, doubtless hundreds of thousands of lives, and billions of money. If we did it in alliance with European countries we would become mixed up in European affairs—and how many years can be recalled when some part of Europe has not been engaged in some sort of war. All of us would be pleased to see every country in Europe and in the world enjoying the blessings of peace and prosperity.

Who of those that are vehemently engaged in urging this country to go to war with Turkey would be willing to go or to have their sons and their fathers go? It is a grave question, one with two sides to it, but let thought prevail, free from fanaticism.—Journal and Tribune.

MARKETING OF LIVE STOCK IN MOTOR TRUCKS DEVELOPING

By Associated Press.
Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 16.—Marketing of live stock by motor trucks is the latest development in the live stock industry.

Although all of the principal centers in the United States have experienced an enormous growth of this form of marketing, the Sioux City market has undergone the greatest growth of all. At present more live stock is being brought to the Sioux City market by truck than to any other market in the United States.

So rapidly has been the development of this form of transporting live stock that practically all of the reading centers are providing adequate facilities for unloading cattle, sheep and hogs from the trucks with the greatest possible speed and convenience.

The general radius for trucks is 50 miles, but frequently loads come 100 miles and more. The greatest distance that a truck has brought live stock to the Sioux City market was from Armour, S. D., a 250-mile drive.

During the first eight months of this year more hogs were delivered by truck to the Sioux City market than to any other market in the United States.

BERTON BRALEY'S DAILY POEM

MUCH MALIGNED

By Berton Braley

Who said that November was dreary
And weary
A month full of shivers and quivers
And gloom
Why, taking the month altogether,
Its weather
Is not half so bad as some people assume.

Of course it is frequently glummer
Then summer
But plenty of days in November are Bright,
And much of its cold and its rigor
Gives vigor,
And fits you to labor with all your might.

The birds who have roasted November
Remember,
Are most of them English; and England no doubt,
Has awful Novembers, bleak, grimy
And slimy,
Which justify whining and pining about.

But here—well, November has merit,
We bear it
Because it brings cider, nuts, apples
And such,
Still, though with what skill I can
Phrase it
I praise it.

I really can't say that I care much for it.

Marriage with the Barretts had reached the breaking point. Things finally snapped when

JOHN BARRETT decided he could bear the domestic tedium no longer. Despite his love for the two children he told

ANITA, his wife, that he had to leave her. He no longer loved her, and now, he said, he was going to

MYRA DEAN, a woman of the world.

Go on with the story.

Anita Barrett looked at her husband with bitter tears in her eyes. She was moved beyond mere anger.

"You're going to ask Myra Dean the honor of taking you!" she managed. "Well, I hope she will do you the honor. And should she refuse you, then, I suppose—I may—hope you will return to me! Oh! Anita's voice was an agony of repugnance and despair. She did not wait for Barrett to reply, but, brushing past him, ran from the room.

He turned to follow, hot words, protests, proposals, crowding to be uttered. The slam of a door stopped them. The room rang with the sound of that door closing. It seemed to be the close of a chapter—the most important chapter of Barrett's life.

"All right!" he muttered savagely. "Let's go!"

He wandered into the passage, his hand seeking with drastic pass. His hand absently took a hat from the hall table—not his own, his son's, a battered sport cap worn on many a motor trip he and his boy had taken together. It clung to his fingers as though he could not let it go. Then, realizing he was weakening, he flung it back and took his own hat and coat.

The garment flung down a flaming red tann o' shanter of his daughter's. How like the color of her cheeks when she came home from a wild flight on the ice-bound lake!

He replaced the hat slowly. Symbolic, it seemed. He could not fling out of the house and all that was in it, without knocking something down—something belonging to his children. "Oh, damn it!" he snapped. "They're old enough. They're with their mother. It's her they love." He paused in the hallway a moment, resolute. "Oh! Can't go crawling back. You've made the bold gesture and you're going—forward!"

Flinging out of the front door, Barrett strode to the nearest car line; he would not touch his own car—it was part of what he said he was leaving. In half an hour he stood before a little colonial studio cottage in a pretty suburb. The bungalow had personality, feminine, yet independent; sensitive but sturdy. Even before Barrett could raise the shiny brass knocker the door opened from the inside.

"Johnny Barrett, what are you doing here at this hour?" sounded a woman's crisp voice.

"Come to offer myself, hide, hoof and all, to you," he laughed in grim mirthlessness.

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Hello, children! How did you get here?" exclaimed the Snow Man.

The Twins climbed a mountain and before long they came to a place where there was a lot of snow.

Right near was a little house where a woodchopper lived, and out in the front yard stood a big white figure looking thoughtfully at nothing at all.

"There's Snow Man," whispered Nancy. "Let's surprise him."

So they tiptoed up softly from behind and startled him so that his butter-bowl hat slid down over his eyes.

"Who is it?" he gasped. "Is school out already? I thought from the looks of the sky it was only ten o'clock. Billy, please pick up my stick and straighten my hat. I would be mortified to death if anyone saw me like this."

Nancy and Nick stepped around where Mr. Snow Man could see them. "We're not Billy," laughed Nancy, straightening his hat.

"My, my! Hello, children. How did you get here?" exclaimed Snow Man, talking as well as he could with his pipe in his mouth.

Nick explained that no mountain was too steep for them to climb with their Magic Green Shoes. And he told about Mother Goose losing her broom, too, and how they were hunting for it.

"Did you happen to see it?" asked Nancy.

"I'm not sure," answered Snow Man in a worried voice. "The children found an old broom somewhere and chopped off the handle to make a gun. With you please see if it is the one you are looking for?"

"Does it chance color?" asked Nancy. "Mother Goose says her broom always makes the sky."

"No," answered Snow Man in a relieved voice. "This can't be it after all."

GOOD SOAP FOR LESS THAN TWO CENTS A POUND

Make It At Home By This Easy Process—Takes Less Than 30 Minutes.

Nowadays, more and more women are doing as their mothers did and are making their own soap. If you have never tried it, you will be surprised to see how easy it is to make good soap, soft soap, hard soap or floating soap,
just by using kitchen scraps and waste
grease together with a can of Merry
War Lye, the safe and sure soapmaker.

In the old days when soap was made by the boiling process it took nearly all day to make a kettle of soap. Now it is hardly any work at all—requires no boiling—takes less than 30 minutes.
Saves you money and gives you all the pure, clean soap you need for kitchen, laundry and all household purposes.

You will find simple directions for soapmaking on the label of every can of Merry War Lye—also many other recipes such as how to make lye hominy, how to soften water, how to make clothes washing easy, how to brighten cooking utensils, etc.

Merry War Powdered Lye is also a wonderful cleaner and purifier for use about the home, barn, chicken house and outhouses. Comes in a convenient can with revolving sitting top that cannot come off, cannot get lost, recloses tightly and preserves contents. It is economical to buy and easy to use.

Ask your dealer for Merry War Lye —be sure you get "Merry War"—the

The Masquerader

"I—" He tried to choke the laugh, but the attempt fell flat. "Oh, I merely speak from—from De Quincy. But I believe this fog is shifting—I really believe it is shifting. Can you oblige me with a light? I had almost forgotten that a man may still smoke though he has been deprived of sight." He spoke fast and disjointedly. He was overwhelmed by the idea that he had let himself go and possessed by the wish to obliterate the consequences. As he talked he fumbled for his cigarette case.

His head was bent as he searched for it nervously. Without looking up, he was conscious that the cloud of fog that held him prisoner was lifting, rolling away, closing back again, preparatory to final disappearance. Having found the case, he put a cigarette between his lips and raised his hand at the moment that the stranger drew a match across his box.

For a second each stared blankly at the other's face, suddenly made visible by the lifting of the fog. The match in the stranger's hand burned down till it scorched his fingers, and feeling the pain, he laughed and let it drop.

"Of all odd things," he said, "then he broke off. The circumstance was too novel for ordinary remark."

By one of those rare occurrences, those chances that seemed too wild for real life and yet belong to no other sphere, the two faces so strangely hidden and strangely revealed were identical, features for features. It seemed to each man that he looked not at the face of another but at his own face reflected in a flawless looking glass.

Of the two, the stranger was the first to regain self possession. Seeing Chilcote's bewilderment, he came to his rescue with brusque tactfulness.

"The position is decidedly odd," he said. "But, after all, why should we be so surprised? Nature can't be eternally original; she must dry up some times, and when she gets a good model why shouldn't she use it twice?" He drew back surveying Chilcote whimsically. "But, pardon me, you are still waiting for that light!"

Chilcote still held the cigarette between his lips. The paper had become dry and he moistened it as he leaned toward his companion.

"Don't mind me," he said. "I'm rather—rather—nervous tonight, and this thing gave me a jar. To be candid, my imagination took hold in the fog and I got to fancy I was talking to myself."

"And he pulled up to find the fancy in some way real?"

"Yes. Something like that."

Both were silent for a moment. Chilcote pulled hard at his cigarette, then remembering his obligations he turned quickly to the other.

"Won't you smoke?" he asked.

The stranger accepted a cigarette from the case held out to him; and as he did so the extraordinary likeness to himself struck Chilcote with added force. Involuntarily he put out his hand and touched the other's arm.

"It's my nerves!" he said, in explanation. "They make me want to feel that you are substantial. Nerves play such beastly tricks!" He laughed awkwardly.

The other glanced up. His expression on the moment was slightly surprised, slightly contemptuous, but he changed it instantly to prove that interest. "I am afraid I am not an authority on nerves," he said.

But Chilcote was preoccupied. His thoughts had turned into another channel.

"How old are you?" he asked, suddenly.

The other did not answer immediately. "My age?" he said at last, slowly. "Oh, I believe I shall be 38 tomorrow—to be quite accurate."

Chilcote lifted his head quickly. "Why do you use that tone?" he asked. "I am six months older than you, and I only wish it was six years. Six years nearer oblivion."

Again a slight incredulous contempt crossed the other's eyes. "Oblivion? Where are your ambitions?" he asked. "They don't exist."

"Don't exist. Yet you voice your country? I concluded that much in the fog."

Chilcote laughed sarcastically. "When one has voiced one's country for six years one gets hoarse—it's a natural consequence."

The other smiled. "Ah, discontent. The modern cancer. But we must be both getting under way. Good night! Shall we shake hands—to prove that we are genuinely material?" he asked.

Chilcote had been standing unusually still, following the stranger's words—caught by his self reliance and now impressed by his personality. Now, as he ceased to speak, he moved very quickly forward, impelled by a nervous curiosity.

"Why should we just had each other and pass—like the proverbial ships?" he said, impulsively. "If nature was careless enough to let the reproduction meet the original, she must abide the consequences."

The other laughed, but his laugh was short. "Oh, I don't know. Our roads lie differently. You would get nothing out of me, and I—" He stopped and again laughed shortly. "No," he said, "I'd be content to pass, if I were you. The unsuccessful man is seldom a profitable study. Shall we say goodnight?"

He took Chilcote's hand for an instant; then, crossing the foot-path, he passed into the roadway towards the Strand.

It was done in a moment; but with his going a sense of loss fell upon Chilcote. He stood for a space, newly conscious of unfamiliar faces and unfamiliar voices in the stream of passers-by; then, suddenly mastered by an impulse, he wheeled and rapidly darted after the tall, lean figure so ridiculously like his own.

Half-way across Trafalgar Square he overtook the stranger. He had paused on one of the small stone islands that break the current of the traffic, and was waiting for an opportunity to cross the street. In the glare of light from the lamp above his head, Chilcote saw for the first time, that under a remarkable neat appearance his clothes were well worn—almost shabby. The discovery then struck him with something more than surprise. The idea of poverty seemed incongruous in connection with the reliance, the reserve the personality of the man. With a certain embarrassed haste he stepped forward and touched his arm.

"Look here," he said as the other turned quickly. "I have followed you to exchange cards. It can't injure either of us, and I—I have a wish to know my self." He laughed nervously as he drew out his card case.

The stranger watched him in silence. There was the same faint contempt, but also there was a reluctant interest in his glance, as it passed upon the fingers fumbling with the case to the pale face with the square jaw, straight mouth, and level eyebrows drawn low over the gray eyes. When at last the card was held out to him he took it without remark and slipped it into his pocket.

Chilcote looked at him eagerly.

"Now the exchange?" he said.

For a second, the stranger did not respond. Then, almost unexpectedly, he smiled.

"After all, it amuses you—" he said; and, searching in his waistcoat pocket, he drew out the required card.

"It will leave you quite unenlightened," he added. "The name of a failure never spells anything." With another smile, partly amused, partly ironical he stepped from the little island and disappeared into the throng of traffic.

Chilcote stood for an instant gazing at the point where he had vanished; then, turning to the lamp, he lifted the card and read the name it bore: "Mr. John Loder, 13 Clifford's Inn."

On the morning following the night of the fog Chilcote woke at nine. He woke at the moment that his man Allsopp tiptoed across the room and laid the silver with his early cup of tea on the table beside the bed.

For several seconds he lay with his eyes shut; the effort of opening them on a fresh day—the intimate certainty of what he would see on opening them—seemed to weight his lids. The heavy, half-closed curtains; the blinds severely drawn; the great room with its splendid furniture, its sober coloring, its scent of damp London winter; above all, Allsopp, silent, respectful, and respectable—were things to dread.

A full minute passed while he still feigned sleep. He heard Allsopp stir discreetly then the inevitable information broke the silence.

"Nine o'clock, sir!"

He opened his eyes, murmured something and closed them again.

The man moved to the window, he quietly pulled back the curtains and half drew the blinds.

"Better night, sir, I hope?" he ventured, softly.

Chilcote had drawn the bedclothes over his face to screen himself from the day-light, murky though it was.

"Yes," he responded. "Those beastly nightmares didn't trouble me, for once." He shivered a little as at some recollection. "But don't talk. Don't remind me of them. I hate a man who has no originality." He spoke snarply. At times he showed an almost childish irritation over trivial things.

Allsopp took the remark in silence. Crossing the wide room, he began to lay out his master's clothes. The action affected Chilcote to fresh annoyance.

"Confound it!" he said. "I'm sick of that routine! I can see you laying out my winding-sheet the day of my burial. Leave those things. Come back in half an hour."

Allsopp allowed himself one glance at his master's figure huddled in the great bed; then, laying aside the coat he was holding, he moved to the door. With his fingers on the handle, he paused.

"Will you breakfast in your own room, sir—or down-stairs?"

Chilcote drew the clothes more tightly round his shoulders. "Oh anywhere—nowhere!" he said. "I don't care."

Allsopp softly withdrew.

Left to himself, Chilcote sat up in bed and lifted the salver to his knees.

The sudden movement jarred him physically; he drew a handkerchief from under the pillow and wiped his forehead; then he pulled his hand to the light and studied it. The hand looked sallow and unsteady. With a nervous gesture he thrust the salver back upon the table and slid out of bed.

Moving hastily across the room, he stopped before one of the tall wardrobes and swung the door open; then after a furtive glance around the room he thrust his hand into the recesses of a shelf and rummaged there. The thing he sought was evidently not hard to find, for almost at once he withdrew his hand and moved from the wardrobe to a table beside the fireplace, carrying a small glass tube filled with tablets.

On the table were a decanter of siphon and a water-jug. Mixing some whisky, he uncorked the tube, again he glanced apprehensively toward the door, then with a very nervous hand dropped two tablets into the glass.

While they dissolved he stood with his hand on the table and his eyes fixed on the floor, evidently restraining his impatience. Instantly they had disappeared he seized the glass and drained it at a draught, replaced the bottle in the wardrobe, and, shivering slightly in the raw air stepped back into bed.

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys

Eat less meat if you feel Back-ache or have Bladder trouble.

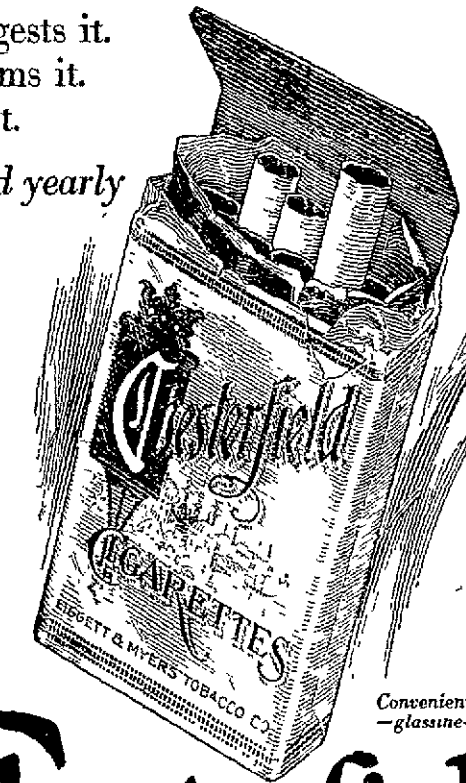

Too much meat may form uric acid, which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Big meat eaters can flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like they relieve the bowels, removing all the acids, waste and poison, else they may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad they have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders.

Kiwanians Meet Today For
First Time in Cumberland

The first meeting of the Kiwanis Club in the Cumberland Hotel was held today and the great enthusiasm shown together with the fact that seventy persons were present, presages a greater interest in the club for the future. Judge J. E. Evans was chairman of the day.

The lunch was served in the grill room of the hotel and the splendid service and food particularly commended the hotel to the club members. A number of delegates to the Baptist convention were present, as well as several out-of-town business men. The Citizens Bank gave the silent boost and presented a little savings bank to put the lunch tips for the waiters in. J. W. Porter drew the attendance prize.

Coch Porter and Superintendent Bradner of the high school each spoke briefly to the Kiwanis Club in behalf of the football team. The former said he realized the boys had not been playing their best so far but added that he was confident they intended to for the future. He asked the Kiwanis Club to do all it could to put pep into the boys, collectively and individually. Mr. Bradner also urged cooperation with and encouragement for the team. He took up in particular the game with Pineville which will be played here November 29, the day before Thanksgiving, and which Middlesboro is determined to win. He put before the club a proposition to buy 24 boxes for the game, at $9 a box. Pineville has already contracted for this amount of boxes. He was assured that Middlesboro would do as much a Pineville, and the matter was referred to the public affairs committee.

Dr. J. A. Gray presented a suggestion for change in train schedule and the matter was referred to a committee composed of F. P. Scales, E. P. Nicholson, A. C. Shelburne, P. M. Parsons and Dr. Jacob Schultz.

The chief speaker of the day was Dr. J. W. Porter, well-known Baptist preacher, author and editor. His subject was "Get Busy." He gave as the key to success staying in a good humor, and his wit and cleverness demonstrated to the audience that he practiced what he preached. He began by saying that he felt sure that in Middlesboro he had at last found the original spot of the Garden of Eden. He was extravagant in his praises of the city and said that he had been in every state in the union and that he had never seen a hotel near the equal of the Cumberland in a town of like size.

The speaker told a series of apt stories and anecdotes which kept his audience roaring with laughter, going from one to another cleverly. He stressed as his main point the advantage of cooperation over competition, in business and everywhere.

PIC TRUCK WRECKED ON EAST CUMBERLAND TODAY

The ton and a half truck of the New South Packing Co. was completely wrecked about 2 o'clock this afternoon when Marion Schneider, the driver, ran into a telephone pole on East Cumberland cutting it off four feet from the ground. He was trying to avoid a wagon near the Giles store.

People who saw the accident say Schneider was driving about thirty-five miles an hour when he met the wagon. As he attempted to swing out of the way of the wagon he ran into the ditch and ran into the pole. Schneider was not hurt, Joe Wilder, but recently released from the hospital where he lay ill from injuries sustained when kicked by a mule, was also in the truck. He was badly bruised up.

M'BORO POSTAL RECEIPTS WILL EXCEED $27,000 THIS YEAR

The postal receipts for this year will exceed $27,000, in Middlesboro, according to Chas. Cooke, postmaster. The receipts for this month are $600 more than the receipts of the same period last year.

There is also a very noticeable increase in the amount of incoming and outgoing mail for Middlesboro, he says. This brings to mind the necessity of another Mail Early campaign for the Christmas holidays, Mr. Cooke says. Last year the campaign was very successful and most of the mailing was completed by December 22. In other years that had been known as one of the busiest days, Mr. Cooke says he expects the campaign this time to be more successful.
